Those, therefore, who hastily declare that all these things are a declusion; that there is nothing in them at all; that from begining to end they are frauds and follies, are nearer the truth, are more scientific and more wise than those who also hastily declare that there is something in them, and that a new force has specared in the more wise than those who also hastly declare that there is something in them, is but a continuation of their first; hysand that a new force has appeared in the terical sommambulists, whose brains are

He maintains that The contest between Spiritualism and anti-Spiritualism is a contest between the source the spiritualism and humanity, between animalism and humanity, between animalism and humanity, between barbarism jand civilization, between the foorteenth century and the twentieth. It abounds today lar more in savage than in civilized lands, and was more potent and more universal in the earlier than in the latter civilizations. Like many other decisions it exists to day—a species of barbarism in the latter content of the species of barbarism in the same of the collowing challenge: it exists to day-a species of barbarism in the mediaval ages into the twentieth century. lowing six facts:

First—Trickery. Most of the trickery is of a cheap, vulgar and transparent character; in no way to be compared with that of Houdin or other great ma-giciabs.

Second—Guess-work or coincidences.
Guess-work is both a science and an art, and much of the success of clairvoyants depends upon the mastery of this art, and the skillful uso which they make of coincidences which happen to us all in every—day life.

Third—Unconscious mental action.

Fourth—Unconscious mental action.

These two facts, either singly or in combination, explain the marvels of planchette, table-Upping, mund-reading, as practiced by Brown, spiritualistic tricksters, sud many amateurs. Those who have not looked into this subject will be surprised to find how many of these marvels can be explained by unconscious muscular action.

Fifth — Physiological idiosyncracies.
Under this head comes the peculiar flexibilliy of many persons, as the Davenport brothers, the Eddys and their imitators, who can make their hands smaller than their wrists, and thus slip out of handculfs and ropes.

Sixth—Phenomena of trance, erroncourty called animal magnetism. A passive state of the mind very easily excited in some persons and closely allied to somin some persons and closery affect to som nambulism and certain types of hysteria. In this state there may be great exaltation of special faculties; but no new faculties appear any more than they appear in insanity, or sleep, or hysteria.

The mysterious performances ascribed to "spirit power" are no greater mysteries than the feats performed in India by the jugglers. When the late WILLIAM H. RWARD was in that country on his ionr ney round the world he witnessed some of these performances that were very wonderful indeed. For instance he saw a man climb a bare pole sixty feet high standing in the open air, and when he reached the top he mysteriously disappeared. After a while, his feet re-an peared, then his legs and body, and he came down. He claimed no supernatural powers. How did he do it?

The New York Herald, alluding to this experience of Mr. SEWARD in India, recalls the case of an Indian juggler who used to live in a "little den in the Bowery" some years ago. He could perform a trick like this :

"A gentleman told the writer that, moved by curiosity once, he went in. The juggler made him sit on the floor. The juggler made him sit on the noor. In a moment two figures, apparently human, rose out of the floor in obedience to the wand of the conjurer. They grew to the ordinary height of a human feing. The visitor made a motion to rise, when the figures sank through the floor instantly. An examination of the place betrayed no visible solution to the ingenious performance."

The tricks of ROBERT HOUDIN, the great magician, have never been surpassed by any of the so-called spiritual phenomena: On one occasion, when he was performing in Algeria, he invited some one of the audience to come on the stage. A young Moor, about twenty years of age, tall, well built and richly dressed, advanced. There was a plain table or the stage, which Houpin asked him to mount. When he did so, Houdin covered him with an enormous cloth cone, and instantly removing it, the Moor was gone. This trick produced a panic in the audience. Screaming, "It is the Evil One!" they clambered over the benches in wild terror and rushed out the door into the street, where, in the public street, rubbing his eyes in stupefaction and wondering how he got there, they found the young Moor. This was only one of many of Houdin's wonderful tricks. He never claimed that there was anything supernatural in them. And yet even the famous EDDy family (some of whose performances Dr. BEARD has recently exposed) never, we presume, did anything so mysterous as this trick

Diphtheria Cannot be Cured

That great scourge, that has visited thousands I households, and has taken from them some ear one, and has left in their places the deepest orrow, is now stripped of its terrors by the imely use of DR. J. BROOKS

CELEBRATED Diphtheria Cure

Diphtheria is both a constitutional and a loca disease, and therefore requires both a constitutional and a local remedy. The Dipriviesal Curan fills both of these indications. The patient swallows the medicine, and by so doing it comes in contact with the diphtheritic excutation of the threat, satringes and loosens the rame, so that the patient can expectorate it. The medicine also gets upon the paris thus left hare, heats the same, and prevents further growth of the coating. The medicine them enter the stomesh and the same, and prevents further growth of the coating. The medicine them enters the stomesh and the blood, destroys the diphtheritic poison there, and in a sky or two the patient is cured of a disease that might have proved fatel in a week's time. Brery family should keep a bottle of the Diphtheria Curz, that they may thus prevent sickness, suffering and each and in many cases a heavy doctor's bill. Brery one is liable at any time, to be assailed by this fell destroyer. Diphtherid, a disease that has taffied the skillot the most celebrated physicians in this and other lands.
